Raymond Nardi State Representative Candidate

Raymond Nardi, democratic candidate for state representative from the 11th Hampden District, today launched his campaign with a statement of his qualifications and a review of his civic and political achievements.

A lifelong resident of Agawam, Nardi currently serves as a member of the Agawam Finance Board and as a Town Meeting Representative. "It is obvious to me", Nardi stated, "that anyone who can trim over $70,000 from funds are approved for our area these projects are consistently hampered by inexcusable and frustrating delay. (Continued on Page 5)

Moran To Conduct Sticker Campaign

Lucille E. Moran of 7 Noble Ave., Westfield, will conduct a sticker campaign for the Republican nomination for County Commissioner in the Sept. 13 primary.

Daughter of the late Attorney and Mrs. Henry A. Moran, she was a resident of Longmeadow most of her life. Since 1961 she has resided in Westfield.

Miss Moran claims the gears of government in Hampden County have been shifted into REVERSE, because of the failure of Commissioners to competently shoulder their duties and maintain County government as the the requests of town department heads and effectively reduce the Agawam tax rate $8.00 per thousand is badly needed in the State Legislature. What is really unique about my political performance," Nardi continued, "is that I not only proved I could do an honest, economical job, but I have been instrumental in increasing the quantity and quality of town services at the same time this cost reduction has been effected."

Included among the improvements attributable to Raymond Nardi's efforts are expansion of the sanitary sewage and surface drainage systems, new sidewalks, watermain extensions as well as street and highway improvements.

"One of the chief concerns in looking toward the future" Mr. Nardi stated, "is the business and economic climate of our area. We are faced with the loss of two major industrial facilities, Gilbert and Barker Mfg. Co., and the Springfield Armory. Many of our families are already affected by the loss. Our local and State Officials must actively unite with civic, management and labor and other interested groups to strengthen the business climate of Western Massachusetts. I am also concerned with the reluctance of the executive and legislative branches of State government to give our area its fair share of the Department of Public Works funds. And, when projects and

Emerson Named Campaign Director For Ray Fontana

Atty. Raymond J. Fontana of Springfield, Republican candidate for the Governor's Council from the Eighth District, today announced that Fred C. Emerson of Worthington, well-known civic

Mr. Emerson said, "Ray Fontana is a candidate who inspires a great deal of enthusiasm, and who is ideally suited by background, experience and interest in Western Massachusetts to serve as a member of the Governor's Council. I have known Ray Fontana for many years, and I know him as an honest and dedicated man who will be a credit to the people of the Eighth District. I am delighted to be associated with Ray Fontana in his campaign. Response to him by the people of the district in these early weeks of the campaign has been most encouraging. The press already has referred to him as the 'front runner' in the campaign, and we plan an effective effort to maintain that position."

Mr. Emerson has long been associated with the Republican Party. He is a past president of the Hampden County Republican Club. He directed Governor Volpe's campaign in Hampden County in 1960, was his statewide campaign director in 1962, and was Hampden-Berkshire District co-ordinator for the governor during his campaign in 1964.

Mr. Emerson, who is vice-president and sales manager of the Spartan Saw Works, Inc., of Springfield, and president and treasurer of the Drummers Club of Worthington, was a member of the Agawam Planning Board for four years and was a member of the Agawam Board of Selectmen for six years. A New Way To Fry Chicken

Chicken is one of the best buys in meat. Certainly there is no more popular dish than fried chicken. Why not give it a different twist and try frying it the Oriental way? It is ever so light and delicate. Use corn starch for coating the chicken pieces, after a quick dip in a mixture of egg and water. Fry in corn oil for the most delicate browning and flavor.

Oriental Fried Chicken

2 eggs
1 tablespoon water
1 cup corn starch
1 teaspoon salt
1 broiler-fryer chicken, cut up
Corn oil for frying

Beat eggs well; mix in water. Combine corn starch and salt. Dip chicken pieces into egg mixture, then into corn starch and salt, then into egg mixture, coating chicken well with each. Pour corn oil into skillet to depth of 1 inch. Heat over medium heat to 375 degrees F., or until 1 inch cube of bread turns brown in 40 seconds. Carefully put chicken into hot oil. Fry, turning once, until light golden brown and tender, about 15 minutes. Makes 2 to 4 servings.

Drunk-driver Bill Passes Test

Boston The Massachusetts House of Representatives passed a so-called "implied consent" law under which car operators arrested for drunken driving would lose their driving privileges for six months if they refused to take a breath test.

The measure was passed by a voice vote without debate. It is one of the bills considered a "must" for highway safety by Richard E. McLaughlin, State Registrar of Motor Vehicles. Fifteen other states have similar laws on their statute books.

'67 Automobile Registrations

Registrar Richard E. McLaughlin today announced that 1967 motor vehicle registration plates will have dark blue numerals on a silver reflectorized background.

The Registry will mail application blanks to holders of reserved number plates having four numbers or less or two numbers or less with a letter prefix or suffix. These must be returned during the month of September.

Applications for other reserved number plates will not be mailed by the Registry. However, in order to retain reserved number plates with five numbers or three or four numbers with a letter prefix or suffix, applications must be received by mail or over the Boston Office counter on or before Friday, Oct. 14. They should not be filed at a branch office.

Reserved number plate applications should be accompanied by the correct fee of $8.

It will be necessary for holders of so-called "vanity" plates to file their applications during the month of September in order to ensure reassignment of the same group of letters or combination of letters and figures for 1967. These plates are $15.

Applications for numbers over or 734-1587

100,000 should not be forwarded by mail to the Boston office of the Registry earlier than Monday, Oct. 3. The fee for these unreserved plates is $6.

In making the announcement concerning 1967 registration plates, Registrar McLaughlin said, "To save time for yourself and to assist Registry personnel processing registration applications, we urge you to examine your application and see that all questions have been answered, that it is signed, and that it has been endorsed by your insurance company. If you are registering a newly-purchased vehicle, be sure to have a sales tax receipt or a sales tax exemption slip."

Announcement will be made later of the date when Boston and branch office counters will accept applications for numbers over 100,000.

On The Lawn with LARRY LAWRENCE

A number of readers have sent me an article that appeared in HOLIDAY magazine, stressing the importance of having FUN on the lawn, the "last frontier in a world of brick and steel." It makes wonderful sense and describes many of the games a family can play even on a small area. An ideal set up would include one all-purpose court for paddle tennis, badminton or even junior volleyball. Croquet is having a revival and when played according to English rules can be as competitive and scientific as billiards.

The cost of lawn sport is low, and a catalog lists twenty-four different games, including horseshoes, quoits, darts, bowls, shuffleboard and variations of lawn golf. Most sporting goods and department stores carry the equipment needed, and if you write to Scotts (Marysville, Ohio) they will send you, free, the rules for playing lawn bowls (bocce) and the new highly competitive form of croquet known as croakey.

Will grass take the hard wear associated with games? It will if you plant a good all-perennial variety and keep it well fed the year round.

Learn And Live Safety Tips

Highways are divided into lanes so that users moving in opposite directions can easily pass one another.

And each lane has a "safest zone" for the different methods of travel in the same direction—on foot, on horseback, on bicycle or motorcycle, or in a motor vehicle.

For your safety—and the safety of others—know and use the "safest zone" for your mode of travel.

If you are walking, walk on the left shoulder of the road facing oncoming traffic.

If you are driving a motor vehicle, keep your vehicle centered in the lane to avoid the possibility of sideswipes from your left, or running off the road on the right.

If you are riding a motorcycle, stay a little to the left or right of center of the lane, so that you can avoid the grease streak in the center.

If you are riding a bicycle, stay as far to the right as possible. If bicycle paths are provided, you must use the paths instead of the road. Bicyclists ride in the same direction as the traffic because at night their headlights would confuse oncoming drivers.

Why the Wedding Rings are Nailed to the Cana Cross

THIS CANA CROSS, dear married couple, has no corpus on it: only two rings, intertwined—the bride's, the groom's: (for Christ has already hung thereon, been taken down, and buried.)

IT IS NOW for you to take His place thereon, everytime you willingly and cheerfully bear each CROSS that comes your way throughout your marriage!

LOOK TO THE CROSS then, for the deepest proof of LOVE in marriage—SELF-SACRIFICE!

A Fantastic Story

One of the most fantastic stories of the twentieth century has to do with undersea exploration and drilling for oil. Fifteen years ago, 30 feet of water was considered "deep" when the first of the offshore drilling rigs were put to work. By the end of 1966, there will be about 150 mobile offshore units in use around the world, with a total value of some $600 million. Some of these rigs will be able to drill exploratory wells in water 1,000 feet deep. In another five years, the number of offshore mobile rigs is expected to reach 200, with a total worth of about $1 billion. By that time, some oilmen believe technology will make it possible to drill exploratory wells from floating rigs in water 8,000 feet deep.

The reason for this intense activity and development in offshore drilling is the result of the belief that the continental shelf may contain close to 700 billion barrels of hydrocarbons, and in the next 20 years, the free world may obtain one fourth of its oil and gas requirements from beneath the oceans.

The story of the oil industry, aside from being a fantastic record of achievement from the time of its founding more than a century ago, provides a living demonstration of the initiative that is synonymous with private enterprise. It explains the miracle of America as a nation, where rivers of oil in its many forms flow day and night to meet its astronomical energy requirements.

By the time a man finds green pastures, he can't climb the fence.

Rate Yourself As A 'Defensive Driver'

For the past several weeks we've been talking about "Defensive Driving"—

Here's a driving quiz to check your defensive driving ability.

Defensive driving, when completely understood and practiced on a full time basis—will:

Help you avoid your own driving faults and errors.

Help you to be constantly alert to the actions of others.

Assist you in compensating for road conditions.

Help you to stay alive.

Defensive driving is not easy. It requires more than just sitting back and keeping out of trouble.

Experts define the defensive driver as one who . . .

1. Is careful to avoid driving errors himself.

2. makes allowances for the lack of skill or improper attitude on the part of the other fellow.

3. does not allow hazards of weather and road conditions or the actions of pedestrians and other drivers to involve him in an accident.

4. keeps continually on the alert, recognizes an accident-producing situation far enough in advance to take the necessary preventive action and concedes the right of way when necessary to prevent an accident.

This "defensive" approach to driving not only helps protect you, your loved ones and your property—it helps make the highways safer for everyone.

This quiz is for your benefit alone. No one else need ever see it, so be completely honest with yourself. See how well you rate.

For each "always" check give yourself 5 points....

For each "usually" check give yourself 3 points....

For each "occasionally" check give yourself 1 point....

Your total.....

If you score 50 points consider a closer look at your defensive driving habits and work toward improving them.

1. Do you leave plenty of room between your car and the car ahead (at least 1 car length for every 10 mph under good conditions)?

ALWAYS USUALLY OCCASIONALLY

2. At night, or when road conditions or visibility are below par, do you reduce your speed regardless of the posted speed limits?

ALWAYS USUALLY OCCASIONALLY

3. Do you give other drivers or pedestrians a break—even when you know your may be legally in the right?

ALWAYS USUALLY OCCASIONALLY

4. Do you use extreme caution when approaching playground areas, or when you see children near the street or highway?

ALWAYS USUALLY OCCASIONALLY

5. Before proceeding through an intersection, do you look in all directions, and slow down or stop according to traffic signs?

ALWAYS USUALLY OCCASIONALLY

6. Do you drive in the correct lane and give proper signals well in advance before making a turn?

ALWAYS USUALLY OCCASIONALLY

7. Are you alert to the actions of other cars around you and do you make allowances for the unexpected?

ALWAYS USUALLY OCCASIONALLY

8. Do you look carefully and signal your intentions before pulling out of a parking place into traffic?

ALWAYS USUALLY OCCASIONALLY

9. Do you keep your temper under control while driving so that it does not affect your good judgment or driving ability?

ALWAYS USUALLY OCCASIONALLY

10. Instead of simply criticizing driving errors of others, do you make a mental note to see if they apply to yourself?

ALWAYS USUALLY OCCASIONALLY

times—so that we can avoid a collision if another driver acts improperly.

Obeying the traffic laws and regulations that are designed to enable us to use our highways safely, and with maximum efficiency.

Keeping our vehicles in safe mechanical condition so that they will not fail us and cause accidents.

Never driving while under the influence of alcohol or drugs that interfere with our driving abilities and judgment.

In brief, driving by the Golden Rule means accepting our personal, moral responsibility to always drive in a manner that will make our highways safe for all.

TODAY'S AGRI-FACT

Markets Director Nat Tilden reminds us that native sweet corn will be at its peak in supply and quality until the first sharp frost, probably in late September. The many different dates of maturity for seed, much planted on the same date, accounts for the constant supply. The Waltham Field Station is re-creating the primitive types of corn dating back thousands of years, ancestors of present-day varieties, as a key to the development of still tastier, more drought and disease-resistant varieties than we enjoy today.

"Seldom is a man color blind where the long green is concerned."

Driving By The Golden Rule Means:

Respecting the rights of others on our highways, as we expect them to respect our rights.

Health for All . . .

The Germ That Gets Around

Music with its charms may soothe the savage beast, but at times music-making can bring out the worst in one of man's most dangerous enemies—the TB germ.

Why music? Because it has been known under certain conditions to furnish the TB organism with a ready means of transportation from an infected person to one or more possible victims. Its favorite mode of travel is via the tiny droplets of moisture that people emit not just when coughing or sneezing, but even when laughing, singing, or otherwise expelling air from their breathing organs.

And so, when people get together to sing or play wind instruments and one of them has TB in its active (communicable) form, that old devil germ has a good chance to hitch a person-to-person ride and set up shop in new territory.

Which is exactly what happened in a couple of recent instances where local epidemics occurred. In an Arkansas boys' school an outbreak of the disease was traced to a member of the school choir who had active tuberculosis and passed it on to some of his fellow songsters. In another case, a clarinet player in a British military band infected eight other musicians before a doctor diagnosed his active TB and stopped the music.

All this doesn't mean that the campaign to eradicate TB should include music eradication. But it does underline the importance of tuberculin tests and chest X-rays as detection devices. In the case of children, experts recommend a TB checkup on entering school and on reaching the seventh grade. In between, parents are advised to see that Junior gets a tuberculin test when he goes to the doctor for his annual medical checkup.

All teachers, bus drivers, and other adults who associate with children should have regular TB checkups. As for persons young or old who live or work in close community, the nonmusical lesson of the military band speaks for itself.

New Hampshire and fished the Baker River while camping in the state park. Bill took his share of fish on both wet and dry flies.

George Gill's favorite lake, Merry Meeting in New Hampshire has just produced another large lake trout . . . 12½ pounds of good eating. The trophy-size fish was 33½ inches long and had a girth of 18 inches. Earlier this year a 14 and 12 pounder were landed by Mass. anglers.

Not One But Two

A Manchester fisherman, Rudolph Kuhn, recently caught not one but two white horned pout! Kuhn was fishing the excavated area of McQuestion Brook in Manchester. His surprise was great enough when he caught the first colorless pout, but it fell just short of amazement when he landed the second.

Angelo Borgatti, North St., Agawam, is a great horned pout fisherman and no doubt he will be heading north immediately in search of the oddities.

Albino fish are rare, as they are generally killed while small. Because they are "different" they become a target for the other fishes.

Fishing the Race

The following report is from the Board of Fisheries and Game of Conn. Fishing for blue fish has improved in the past week at the Race. The largest fish reported was 19 pounds. At the western end of the Sound fishing for blue fish is good. In the Bridgeport area 1 to 3 lb. bluefish are providing good fishing. Also 4 to 12 lb. bluefish are being taken at the Stratford Shoals area.

This report makes you feel like getting down to the Race and enjoying the fabulous fishing doesn't it? Well, this is just what it did to Stan Berchulski, Nick Tuzzio, and this writer.

We contacted Larry Fountain, who has a cottage on Groton Long Point, and he invited us down. He had taken four blues on surface plugs the day before. Larry lined up a white marlin trip for us but it had to be canceled because we arrived too late . . . Stanley mixed up the directions to the cottage and at one time we were heading towards Providence, R. I.

Charlie Hauff, Belcher Fuel and Oil Company, offered to substitute with his 26 foot Cris Craft and off we were for the Race at 8 in the morning. What an experience! There must have been 200 boats of all sizes and shapes bobbing around in and out on the boiling water. Fishermen were lined up on the boats, balancing precariously, pumping their fishing rods up and down violently. They call this method of fishing "jigging." The metal jig or bait is dropped right to the bottom (50 to 80 feet deep) and then either reeled up rapidly or jerked up and dropped down to the bottom again.

We fished this method. I don't think my arms will be the same again. To make it worse, we did not have a strike all day long. Impossible you say, fishing the Race, yet it is the truth. The old Berchulski jinx was really working overtime. In between the running of the tide, we pulled in off of Fisher Island and fished for fluke . . . didn't catch one. Berchulski caught a couple of small fish on worms. However, all wasn't lost, we ate good . . . the refreshments were cold . . . and the companionship excellent. We left Mr. Hauff talking to himself and every once in the while we observed him shaking his head side to side. This was the first time he was skunked fishing the fabulous Race.

YOU AND YOUR INSURANCE

(A public service column about property and casualty insurance)

by KENNETH S. RAFFOL

CHECK YOUR INSURANCE NEEDS IF YOU RENT A SUMMER HOME

"I am renting a summer home. Do I need any insurance or is the owner liable for property damage or personal injury?" a reader asks.

You definitely need coverage if a member of your family were held responsible for a fire, or if a guest were injured as a result of carelessness on the part of a member of your family, or if your belongings were stolen—to mention just a few cases—you, not your landlord, could be liable.

However, a homeowners or tenants package policy on your regular residence might protect you against financial disaster in your vacation home.

For example, if a summer tenant were held responsible for a no one enjoys frittering away a balmy and beautiful day over a hot stove to prepare an elaborate meal.

If you're entertaining now you might consider one-dish entrees like tangy cheese fondue, tuna casserole or beef Bourguignon that can be made at the table in a chafing dish or an electric frying pan. Aids that say "Help Yourself" are a must: a cheese board with assorted goodies, a vinegar-and-oil set for do-it-yourself salad dressing, and a large bowl filled with crushed ice that temptingly holds raw carrots, celery, and radishes, and a basket of fresh fruit. Light foods can be steamed up with frosty beverages. During this season especially, I always keep a good supply of chilled Pepsi-Cola on hand for my guests.

If you are having an outdoor barbecue, the best rule is keep it simple. Thick chops, a good-size steak or hamburgers are always enhanced by open-fire cooking. I make a big pot of corn-on-the-cob which I boil in 3 quarts of milk with a half pound of butter and salt and pepper in it. This gives the corn a very unusual and delicious flavor. I also serve little individual chafing dishes of melted butter so there's always some ready to pour over the cobs.

When you undertake a hostessing assignment in these balmy days, remember that you'll have the most fun when you have the least amount of work. On warm days you can keep cool, if you insist that hospitality put on a casual dress.

fire, he would be covered—probably up to $25,000—under the fire legal liability section of the most popular type of homeowners package policy.

Personal property would be covered—up to the policy limits—under the off-premises provision of the most popular homeowners policy.

Also, injury to guests or even members of the family would most likely be covered—again up to the limits of the policy—under the personal liability provision of the popular homeowners form.

Mayor John F. Collins has urged the federal government to broaden its investigation into rising food costs.

Collins praised the action of the Federal Trade Commission in probing the cost of bread and milk, but maintained that its investigation should go further and deeper.

He declared that this is one of the matters he would press if he is elected to the United States Senate in November, characterizing it as "extremely serious."

"I am deeply disturbed by the climbing costs of many of our basic and staple foods," Mayor Collins asserted.

"This is imposing a severe hardship on many families in moderate circumstances, especially those with children," he said.

"As Agriculture Secretary Orville Freeman has pointed out, the increase in prices being charged by farmers does not appear to justify the prices the housewife is being forced to pay when she buys a number of the necessities of life," the Mayor continued.

"Since this principally involves inter-state trade, the federal government should make a thorough investigation into the seemingly unreasonably high prices being charged for many essential foods and then to take whatever steps may be necessary for the protection of the family budget," Collins stated.

"As I have said from the outset of my campaign, one of the important domestic issues and problems before the American people today is the very real threat of inflation.

"It is our responsibility to take immediate steps to prevent any further dangerous rise in the cost of bringing up a family," Mayor Collins concluded.

the questions most frequently asked of him as he carries his campaign for Lieutenant Governor across the Commonwealth.

Question: Why are you running for Lieutenant Governor?

Answer: The short answer to that is because I want the job. The more accurate answer would be that after holding high appointive office in state government, I've concluded I can get more done, get a better and wider hearing for the things I believe in, as an elected official. Without getting into a complicated or detailed answer, just let me say that after a period of implementing the policies of others, I've decided I can play a more effective role by attempting to shape the policy to begin with.

Question: Why do you keep saying cleaning up water pollution is one of the most important tasks before us?

Answer: Because I believe it—and I can prove it. It's more than just an idealistic goal. Clean water has...etc.

Tom Adams, Democratic candidate for U. S. Senate, will kick-off his local campaign next week with appearances at Springfield shopping centers and factories. Highlights of his Springfield visit will be a press conference Tuesday morning and the formal opening of the headquarters at 188 Worthington St. at an open house Tuesday evening. He will speak at a luncheon with local ministers Thursday and a large rally will be held Friday evening. Adams is looking forward to these opportunities to meet the people of Springfield, explain his program to them, and learn more about the problems of Western Massachusetts.

Usually, there are few issues that separate candidates in a primary contest. Thomas Boylston Adams says that he is solidly in favor of the Great Society, but there can be no Great Society and war at the same time. Tom Adams' campaign offers the voters of Massachusetts the choice between a peaceful solution to the Vietnam conflict and continued escalation of the war, its costs and loss of lives.

As a practicing attorney and a member of many legal professional organizations he has tried over 1,000 cases before state and federal courts over the past 14 years.

A meteoric political career began with his nomination for Norfolk District Attorney in 1958.

The elections of 1962 stunned the "pros" as a virtual unknown was named to number two elective offices. Two years as Lieutenant Governor provided unmatched state executive and legislative experience. He formulated and filed over 50 bills and as acting Governor signed into law over 80 additional bills.

In 1964 he received Nomination as the Democratic Candidate for Governor of the Commonwealth.

On June 11, 1966 the Democratic Convention gave him a first ballot endorsement as nominee for the office of Attorney-General.

A candidate for public office spends much of his time answering all manner of questions—from his personal affairs to his public policies. As a candidate for Lt. Governor, Francis W. Sargent has been fielding more than his share because his prior public service includes such widely separated areas as Commissioner of Public Works and Commissioner of Natural Resources. Here is a sampling of some of ligation placed on Courts by our system of government. It is the job of judges to see that this is done. And, it is the function of County government, whether it be England, Ireland or Hampden County, U. S. A., to provide this service for the decent people in the county as the first order of its business.

When road-blocks are erected against a free and open use of public courts by honest members of the community; the main spring of America-style Constitutional government corrodes. Since a government is only as good as its courts; where courts are no good, the government automatically becomes worthless.

There are several reasons why the government of Hampden County, is indeed, worthless.

Among the first, is the fact that Massachusetts is the ONLY state in the Union where the people have absolutely no say about who sits on county or state benches.

In every other State, judges for County District and Probate courts are elected by the people of each county jurisdiction, usually for four (4) year terms; and judges for State Superior and Supreme courts are either elected or appointed for limited tenure. Connecticut has such a system, consistent with the home rule principle.

There is no Law on the Books of Massachusetts or even of the Federal government, making Bar membership or graduation from a Law school a qualification for judicial office.
